14. General Objectives

In a degree in International Relations and/or Political Science, knowledge of Economics is essential, since both international relations and political science are themselves based on political and economic foundations.

In the world we live in, there are interactions and reciprocal influences between politics and the economy that make it difficult to separate the two realities, hence the need to understand economic phenomena.

15. Specific Objectives

In this context, it is essential that students of International Relations and Political Science have, from the first year of the degree, the necessary tools to understand real-life phenomena. Instrumental that will be useful to them in the elaboration of future works, academic and professional, and will bring them an added value to the knowledge in other areas. This is the objective of the Introduction to Economics course.

16. Skills to be acquired

- Be able to understand and discuss the economic reality of today's world and the main concepts associated with it.
