14. General Objectives

This course unit intends to study some of the main regional conflicts, past and present, in order to allow students to gain relevant knowledge concerning these conflicts and the relevant dynamics involved, as well as the resulting consequences, which often extend well beyond the region where they occur. Particular attention will be given to regions such as the Middle East, the Balkans and Eastern Europe.

15. Specific Objectives

The objective is to provide students with solid knowledge, albeit at an introductory level, about some of the main regional conflicts in order to stimulate the students' analysis of those conflicts, as well as others that may occur in the future, using their analytical skills acquired during the course.

16. Skills to be acquired

The idea is for students to acquire a solid and relevant knowledge of the subjects taught but also to learn analytical skills that may allow them to understand and analyse not just past and present conflicts but also others that may occur in the future.

17. Teaching Methodology

To center the teaching and learning process according to the integrated participation of the students and an interaction between the lecture and the students according to the paradigm underlined within the Bologna Process.
