14. General Objectives

The objective is to transmit to master's students the principles and rules of scientific research methodology applied to legal science. It is intended to transmit a solid and up-to-date training regarding the formal and substantial aspects necessary for the investigation and realization of a doctoral thesis.

15. Specific Objectives

The master's student should know the different methods of scientific investigation, as well as those that are applied to legal science. It will also have to attend to the characteristic disciplinarity of the legal knowledge, as well as to know in depth the legal sources that serve as base to the investigation of a doctoral thesis.
From a formal point of view, master's students must know the rules for preparing a doctoral thesis.

16. Skills to be acquired

Knowledge of formal and bibliographic aspects and legal databases.
Planning and elaboration of a research project.
In-depth knowledge of formal rules in the preparation of scientific papers.
Knowledge of the legal regime of plagiarism.
