14. General Objectives

The general objectives of this discipline are:

1. To study and analyze Public International Law in light of the new challenges it faces today, considering the progressive confrontation between normative intentionality and the effective application of norms, particularly regarding the protection of Human Rights.
2. To study and analyze the actual role played by States and International Organizations as subjects of International Law.

15. Specific Objectives

Specific objectives of this discipline are:

1. Analyze the real importance of Public International Law in light of the most pressing issues of the contemporary world, including migration.
2. Reflect on the challenges posed to modern Public International Law, taking into account the resurgence of dominant nation-states on the international stage.

16. Skills to be acquired

UNIVERSIDADE LUSÍADA
LISBOA

- Acquire practical knowledge of the mechanisms for defending international human rights.
- Develop the ability to understand Public International Law in both its formal and real dimensions.

17. Teaching Methodology

The teaching of this discipline (course unit) will involve:

- The presentation of topics listed in the program during theory/practice classes.
- Reflection on these topics, with a focus on promoting debate among students.

18. Course Unit Program

1. Public International Law and the Portuguese Constitution of 1976.
2. Public International Law, Nation-States, and International Organizations.
3. Public International Law as a regulator of the "International Society" or as a precursor of the "International Community"?
4. The international system of defense and protection of Human Rights.
5. Public International Law at the crossroads of the present, facing the "resurgence" of Nation-States.

19. Assessment Methods

Continuous assessment entails the following requirements:

- Regular attendance of theory/practice and tutorial classes, either in-person or online, as stipulated by the current regulations.
- Completion of a written assignment with an oral presentation in class, which must receive a positive grade (minimum of 10 points).

20. Didactic Resources

Indication of Bibliography (books and scientific articles), available to students at the University Media Center and b-on (online knowledge library).

21. Sustainability Objectives

Assuming that sustainable education goes beyond the mere presentation of curriculum content, we define here three main objectives:

1. Promotion of critical analytical thinking
2. Continuous distinction between mere information and education
3. Education aimed at the free determination of future choice
