14. General Objectives

The subject of Private International Law aims to introduce students to the problems raised by the regulation of situations of international private life, i.e., legal situations that are in contact, through any of its elements, with more than one national legal system and the solutions for them enshrined in current law.

15. Specific Objectives

The main rules of conflict of laws in the area of internal, European and international sources that are in force in the Portuguese legal order will be examined, as well as the principles and rules that govern their interpretation and application.

16. Skills to be acquired

The student is introduced to problems arising from the transnational jus reality, and must acquire the ability to solve legal problems arising from concrete situations subsumable in Private International Law.

17. Teaching Methodology

Exposition of syllabus contents in theoretical classes and resolution of practical hypotheses in practical classes, with analysis of legislation, judicial decisions, national, European and international, realization of written and oral works by students, involving students in all activities, including promotion of debates. The curricular unit operates both under continuous assessment and final assessment.
