14. General Objectives

General objectives - Above all, to undertake a critical analysis of economic theory evolution up to nowadays, through the comparative study of works by the leading authors in the History of Economic Thought and its insertion into the economic and social reality, underlining the mutual relationship between Facts and Ideas.

15. Specific Objectives

Specific objectives - Systematization of progress in Economics as a Science: chronologically interlinked knowledge of the more relevant contributions for such an evolution, including the influence of material infrastructure. Consolidation of the mastering of methodological foundations of Economic Science through the ages.

16. Skills to be acquired

Skills - Capacity to build an economic and social framework to the discussion of an issue, based on the past/present contributions of different authors. Analysis of their distinct approaches, starting with a careful selection of useful variables, taking advantage of the steps provided by successive schools of thought.

17. Teaching Methodology

Teaching Methodology - Lecture/debate classes, always open to enlarged discussions, following the specificity of the issues and the interest put forward by students. Availability of documents covering our issues, namely circulation/discussion of major works by leading authors.

Presentations by students. Support to individual and collective papers.

19. Assessment Methods

UNIVERSIDADE LUSÍADA
LISBOA

Continual evaluation methodology - The "Knowledge Evaluation General Regulation" in force will apply, including the implementation of two written intermediate examinations; they may be complemented, with the Professor's agreement, by individual papers, subject to discussion. If both ways are followed weights will be, respectively, 3 and 2.

20. Didactic Resources

Didactic resources - Bibliography: the limited space available in this form will be overcome by a guided information through other sources, starting by the ones given in the "Syllabus". Scripts, dealing with all the subjects in the Programme, made available after their presentation. Major documentation consultation, including, as referred, the major works by leading authors. Information related with research.

21. Sustainability Objectives

Sustainability objectives - To assure access equality of all students to a high quality knowledge, allowing them adequate professional and cultural capacities to perform important roles in the functioning of a society, aiming at a collective and individual well-being in a framework of increasing sustainability. To guarantee strong dematerialization of curricular current documents and deepening research needs.
