14. General Objectives

Prepare students for the study of different legal subjects by introducing them to the world of law and its basic scientific concepts, and by familiarising them with legal reasoning, so that they can understand the foundations of the complex legal phenomenon as a whole. Provide a general understanding of how law arises, what it consists of and how it is applied.

15. Specific Objectives

Start the legal training of students in this scientific area and curricular unit, with fundamental notions of law, notions that allow them to understand the legal subjects taught in the curricular units of the different years of this degree. Introduction to legal thought. Allow students to acquire knowledge on the specific topics of this curricular unit.

16. Skills to be acquired

Domain and understanding of the fundamental concepts and notions of Law taught. Knowing how to apply acquired knowledge to new situations. Knowing how to consult, interpret and relate the concrete parts of the legal instruments that are being mentioned, with the concepts studied and other subjects taught. Resolution and understanding of practical cases presented.

17. Teaching Methodology

Theoretical development of subjects in plenary theoretical-practical classes. Practical application of notions and concepts in practical classes, through the study and analysis of cases, with systematic interventions by students. Preparation of assignments on the subjects taught.
